Expanding the Limits..😎

Learning is not just about collecting information…
Learning means expanding your limits.

When a person says, “I can’t do this,”
they accept the boundaries of who they are today.
But when the same person says, “I will learn,”
they begin building the strength of who they can become tomorrow.

When a child learns to walk, they fall many times…
But they are not afraid of falling, because deep inside they know — every attempt is taking them forward.

Life works the same way.
Learning a new skill, taking new responsibilities,
speaking in front of people, understanding technology,
or even accepting your mistakes —
all these things break the old limits within us.

Remember…
The person who stops learning
slowly becomes smaller from within.
But the person who keeps learning grows not by age… but by mindset.

So ask yourself every day —
“What did I learn today
that made me a little better than yesterday?”
